Transitional Residential Treatment

A live-in treatment program, located at MHPs Warner House, for those recovering from substance abuse or dependence. This program runs from four to six weeks and encourages a structured lifestyle with household chore contributions, individual therapy, group therapy and skill building.

Warner House provides a living environment for clients that more closely resembles a home, including the following amenities:

- A communal gathering area
- Calm outdoor space
- Close to public transportation
- Easy access to downtown Boulder
